5. Any Other Business

5.1 The UK Quality Code Consultation

Potential impact of the framework changes on students.

Guide given out to all attendees. The deadline for the consultation is December 22nd 2017.

The Register is a list of all the institutions that qualify to act as a University. Lincoln will most likely be in the approved (fee cap) bracket. This means students can access student finance, and the University can access extra grants and funding.

The Office for Students is a new organisation with four key objectives:

- All students from all backgrounds are supported to access and received a good quality education, and that the qualifications hold their value over time. Access and widening participation agreements will be in place. Access statements will show how the University will widen access to higher education.
- 2) All Students interested will be protected, including if a provider or course closes.
- 3) All Students will receive 'Value for money'
- 4) Universities will be rated on their ability to widen participation. The midlands is not a very diversity area, we may struggle to widen access and may be marked down for this.

Looking at income of graduates – Lincoln is general a low income area and some subjects are higher paying for graduates – science more than arts. Universities will be rated on the income of their graduates, not on the quality of their experience whilst at university. Universities will also be rated on the justifications of the high rates of pay of Senior Staff members. The weighting of the NSS (National Student Survey) on TEF (Teaching Excellence Framework) has been halved. It will be focused on earnings after the degree, not student experience whilst at University. Every University must take part in the TEF.

There is a Students as Consumers ethos – a consumer ethos does not allow much room for change. Student Voice elements start to be removed , and we are currently highly rated on Student Voice and Student Engagement.

The Quality code defines the baseline standards for Universities – what makes quality, what makes a good University. There are now four expectations, but there used to be 19. Student engagement, volunteering, Employability are examples of things that have been removed. They may come in a supplementary package, but this will not be regulated.

Statements are quite vague and not well explained. Statements such as Delivering a High Quality Course are included– The definition of a quality course is not given and how this can be measured is not detailed.

The Positives – there is a focus on outcomes not process.

Some of the sanctions include suspending courses if the University or Course does not meet the standards – this is similar to an Ofsted inspection in a School.

Easier for universities to comply with, but is it the right thing for students. Questions:

Hannah Barr – Complaints process – what would happen after a complaint has been made?

Response: Processes are not fully defined yet as we are still in consultation stage.

Thomas Lock – Are they using the words 'Value for money'? Response: Yes, 28 times.

Casey Maloney – if this still gets passed, even if we say no – do we have to go with it or can we do our own things as we value student engagement? Response: We have every faith that the University will still continue to value student engagement but they are not required to do so.

Glen Allison – Have the University responded yet? Response: They asked SU to feed into their response as well as us writing our own.

Matthew Gilbert – Calculates income after degree – does it factor in research ability of the institution?

Response: It is based on HMRC data, nothing that the University does or can do will be factored in.

Callum Restall- As Students do we have any protection if courses are cancelled? Response: Yes, most likely in monetary value but you cannot refund bad experience or time.

Callum Bailey – Student engagement is not listed as a quality but I don't expect it to disappear just because it is changing. It may give more value to other degrees at other unis. Value or money is not always a bad thing – we want good value for money.

Kudzai Muzangaza– if we go to a Russell Group University – regardless of how good teaching was, your University would be rated better as you will be earning more. How do we actively campaign against this?

Response: It has not been fully decided yet – it is a consultation. We will have a chance to say more once they have considered consultation reports.

Emily Phynn – do they take other things in to account or is it just what you earn Response: Just earnings.

Connor Delany – Students from poorer backgrounds and areas, we are reducing social mobility. As you come from a poorer background you will go to a worse University.

Liam O'Dell – How is The Quality code connected to OFS (Office for Students)? Response: The OFS is the regulatory body and one of the consultations they are working on is the Quality code. Office for students produces this – they are renewing the code. We are not completely opposed to this. The widening participation parts are great but the new definition of quality is a concern.

Isaac Jackson – What sort of time scale, when will it take affect? Response: QAA first consultation is on 13th December. Overall consultation for OFS is 22nd January. All will be reviewed until April. Then it will be published. This is when the OFS will be in place. By 1st August 2019 this will fully be in place.

Hannah Barr- Do self-employed people get included in outcomes? Response: Cannot 100% say, but it likely that they will be as they are done through HMRC and tax payments.

Hannah Barr - Would it be the same across all courses and disciplines, are they going to be held to the same standard? Response: There are four indicators as to what quality is but it is likely all areas will be held to these four, there will likely be some flexibility but this has not been confirmed yet.

5.2 Module Evaluations – prizes to be won. Small PG survey is currently taking place too.

5.3 Charity commission – freedom of speech issues

Charity commission have investigated that incident. The Board of Trustees reported what decisions they made to the charity commission and they checked that the SU did this correctly. The Charity commission are satisfied with the handling of the incident.

Questions

Liam O'Dell – charity commission said it was the responsivity of the trustee to report this, the charity commission said they were only made aware once the Linc put in a freedom of information request. Did the trustees inform the charity commission last year and if so when?

Response: There is a threshold of when it is serious enough, and the trustees deemed it was not serious enough and were happy with the handling of the situation. This did not meet threshold to need reporting.

5.4 Kudzai Muzangaza - Student Leader (Full Time Officer) reports – Like SUggestions, these can be voted on. If you are not happy with progress, you can hold us to account.

5.5 Kudzai Muzangaza - Thank you for attending. Raffle for Quack tickets – winners will be emailed, and money to Sports and Societies with the highest attendance will also be contacted.

5.6 Connor Delany – Housing fayre on tomorrow 11 am – 6 pm, all accredited landlords will be there. There will be a raffle this year for up to £450 towards one month's rent. This will be held in Engine Shed.
